September 10, 2010: Showtime TV's Showhouse

In Showhouse, Showtime TV's 2010 House on September 10, 2010 at 1:00 am

By Lynn Byrne. Showtime puts on an annual showhouse where they invite designers to express the feel of their hit TV shows in a room. True confession: I don't watch anything on Showtime, so you all will have to judge whether these spaces match up with their shows.

If, like me, you don't watch Showtime, the shots are still interesting. Some of these spaces are pretty funky.

For The Big C, BG Studio International created a clarity lounge and contemplation room. I gather it's supposed to be soothing where the main character of the show can get away and regroup. How does it make you feel?

To me, the most serene space by far, is this bedroom designed by Stephen Chung and Matthias Altwicker for The Big C. The room is intended as a soothing, thoughtful refuge for the cancer victim. The person in the room can actually control the color in the space.
